PETITION FOR A WRIT OF CERTIORARI TO THE UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE FIFTH CIRCUIT

The Petitioners, WILLIAM PRENTIS TUCKER, DAISY BELL HUGHES and RONALD H. JACKSON, pray that a Writ of Certiorari issue to review the opinion and judgment of the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit entered in this matter on January 22, 1976.

OPINION BELOW

The judgment of the District Court for the Middle District of Georgia was affirmed by the Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit in an opinion entered January 22, 1976. The opinion and judgment of the Court of Appeals is attached hereto as Appendix "A".

JURISDICTION

The opinion and judgment of the Court of Appeals was entered on January 22, 1976. The jurisdiction of this Court is invoked under Title 28, United States Code, Section 1254(1).

QUESTIONS PRESENTED FOR REVIEW

1. Whether the District Court erred in denying defense motions for disclosure of illegal electronic interceptions absent an affidavit from the Government affirming or denying the existence of such interceptions.

2. Whether the District Court erred in denying Petitioners' motions for judgment of acquittal.

STATUTORY PROVISIONS INVOLVED

§ 1955. Prohibition of illegal gambling businesses

(a) Whoever conducts, finances, manages, supervises, directs, or owns all or part of an illegal gambling business shall be fined not more than $20,000 or imprisoned not more than five years, or both.

(b) As used in this section–

(1) "illegal gambling business" means a gambling business which–

(i) is a violation of the law of a State or political subdivision in which it is conducted;

(ii) involves five or more persons who conduct, finance, manage, supervise, direct, or own all or part of such business; and

(iii) has been or remains in substantially continuous operation for a period in excess of thirty days or has a gross revenue of $2,000 in any single day.

(2) "gambling" includes but is not limited to pool-selling, bookmaking, maintaining slot machines, roulette wheels or dice tables, and conducting lotteries, policy, bolita or numerous games, or selling chances therein.

(3) "State" means any State of the United States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, and any territory or possession of the United States.

§ 2515. Prohibition of use as evidence of intercepted wire or oral communications.

Whenever any wire or oral communication has been intercepted, no part of the contents of such communication and no evidence derived therefrom may be received in evidence in any trial, hearing, or other proceeding in or before any court, grand jury, department, officer, agency, regulatory body, legislative committee, or other authority of the United States, a State, or a political subdivision thereof if the disclosure of that information would be in violation of this chapter.

§ 3504. Litigation concerning sources of evidence.

(a) In any trial, hearing, or other proceeding in or before any court, grand jury, department, officer, agency, regulatory body, or other authority of the United States–

(1) upon a claim by a party aggrieved that evidence is inadmissible because it is the primary product of an unlawful act or because it was obtained by the exploitation of an unlawful act, the opponent of the claim shall affirm or deny the occurrence of the alleged unlawful act;

(b) As used in this section "unlawful act" means any act the use of any electronic, mechanical, or other device (as defined in section 2510(5) of this title) in violation of the Constitution or laws of the United States or any regulation or standard promulgated pursuant thereto.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Petitioners herein, along with two other individuals were indicted by a Federal Grand Jury sitting in the Middle District of Georgia. The indictment charged conspiracy (18 U.S.C. § 371) and illegal gambling (18 U.S.C. § § 1955 and 2). Following entry of not guilty pleas, various motions were filed, including motions for disclosure of illegal electronic interceptions. The trial court denied these motions two days after their receipt. This ruling was made without benefit of a hearing or any response whatsoever by the Government.

During the trial of the Petitioners the Government called some sixteen Government agents and seven unindicted co-conspirators who testified.

At the conclusion of the Government's case-in-chief, the Petitioners moved for a judgment of acquittal upon the ground, inter alia, that the evidence was insufficient to support a conviction for violation of Title 18 U.S.C.

§ 1955(a). This motion was denied and the case was submitted to the jury which returned guilty verdicts as to the Petitioners.[1]

REASONS FOR GRANTING THE WRIT

I.

THE DISTRICT COURT ERRED IN DENYING PETITIONERS' MOTIONS FOR DISCLOSURE OF ILLEGAL ELECTRONIC INTERCEPTIONS ABSENT AN AFFIDAVIT FROM THE GOVERNMENT AFFIRMING OR DENYING THE EXISTENCE OF SUCH INTERCEPTIONS.

That the Government is precluded from using any evidence derived directly or indirectly from any illegal electronic surveillance is established by 18 U.S.C. § 2515 and Gelbard v. United States, 408 U.S. 41. Moreover, the Government must come forward and affirm or deny the existence of any such surveillance, 18 U.S.C. § 3504, Gelbard v. United States, supra; In re Evans, 452 F.2d 1239 (D.C. Cir., 1971), cert. den., 408 U.S. 930, 92 S.Ct. 2479, 33 L.Ed. 2d 342; Beverly v. United States, 468 F.2d 732 (5th Cir., 1972); In re Grumbles, 453 F.2d 119 (3rd Cir., 1971); and they must come forward with such affirmation or denial on the simple assertion that illegal electronic surveillance took place, 18 U.S.C. § 3504, In re Evans, supra.

[1] The other two indicted individuals changed their pleas to guilty immediately prior to the commencement of the trial.

The allegations in this case of possible illegal electronic surveillance must be viewed in light of the Court's denial of defense motions to discover information concerning wiretaps.[2] Under such circumstances it is felt that a valid claim under 18 U.S.C. § 3504 was asserted and the Court of Appeals erred in affirming the denial of the motions for disclosure without requiring the Government to affirm or deny the existence of such materials as requested.

II.

THE DISTRICT COURT ERRED IN DENYING PETITIONERS' MOTIONS FOR JUDGMENT OF ACQUITTAL.

At the close of the prosecution's case, Petitioners made timely motions for judgments of acquittal under Rule 29(a), Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure. The motions were denied.

One of the grounds urged in support of the motions was the insufficiency of the evidence presented at trial to support a conviction under the standards set forth by this Court in United States v. Bridges (5th Cir., 1974), 493 F.2d 918. In Bridges, Court held that a conviction under 18 U.S.C. § 1955(a) requires the appropriate quantum of proof that a minimum of five persons were involved in the gambling business during the requisite thirty days of its substantially continuous operation, or on a day with a gross revenue of at least $2,000.00. A review of the record of this trial fails to disclose an evidentiary basis for fulfilling these requirements.

[2] In their motions for discovery Petitioners had requested copies of any orders authorizing wiretaps, disclosure of any Court Orders permitting same, documents authorizing wiretaps under color of 18 U.S.C. § 2511, the name and model of any devices used to conduct interceptions and an opportunity to hear any recordings made.

CONCLUSION

For the above reasons a Writ of Certiorari should issue to review the judgment of the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

UNITED STATES, of America,

William Prentis TUCKER, Daisy Bell Hughes, and Ronald H. Jackson, Defendants-Appellants.

No. 75-1478.

United States Court of Appeals,
Fifth Circuit.

Jan. 22, 1976.

Appeals from the United States District Court for the Middle District of Georgia.

Before BROWN, Chief Judge, RIVES and GEE, Circuit Judges.

GEE, Circuit Judge:

William Prentis Tucker, Daisy Bell Hughes and Ronald H. Jackson were convicted and given concurrent sentences on one count of violating the five-man gambling statute, 18 U.S.C. § 1955, and one count of conspiring to do so in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 371. These convictions were based on their operation of a Macon, Georgia lottery, whose winners were determined by the total volume on the New York Stock Exchange. On appeal, they assert errors in the disposition of their pretrial motions, in the conduct of the trial, and in the substance of their convictions. Finding the entire panoply of objections to be without merit, we affirm.

I. PRETRIAL MOTIONS

[1] Tucker and Hughes filed a number of pretrial motions and now argue that the district court erred in handling four of them.[1] Their first point is that the court should have suppressed the evidence obtained in a search of Hughes' house trailer and Tucker's person on their personal "Black Tuesday," December 18, 1973. Specifically, they assert that the warrants under which these searches were conducted were defective under Aguilar v. Texas, 378 U.S. 108, 84 S.Ct. 1509, 12 L.Ed.2d 723 (1964), and that there was no probable cause.

[2, 3] When, as here, a search warrant is issued on an affidavit reciting the tip of an unnamed informant, Aguilar's familiar two-pronged test normally requires that the affidavit disclose particular facts or circumstances which justify concluding that the informant is a reliable or trustworthy person and specific facts or circumstances tending to demonstrate that the informant has gathered his information in a reliable manner. United States v. Chavez, 482 F.2d 1268, 1270 (5th Cir. 1973). With respect to Informants One and

[1] In argument, appellants' counsel also contended that the district court erred in denying motions for bills of particulars and in permitting noncompliance with the court's order requiring the prosecution to disclose inducements to co-conspirators or prosecution witnesses. The denial of a bill of particulars is reversible only on a showing of prejudice or a clear abuse of discretion by the trial court. E.g., United States v. Bearden, 423 F.2d 805, 809 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 400 U.S. 836, 91 S.Ct. 73, 27 L.Ed.2d 68 (1970). Appellants have not made such a showing. While the record indicates that the government never responded to the order requiring disclosure, nothing in the record indicates that its silence was a noncompliance with the order.

Three,[2] Aguilar's first prong is satisfied by an explicit claim of past reliability.[3] Additionally, each informant's tip was extremely detailed, and Informant One's tip contained a declaration against penal interest. See United States v. Harris, 403 U.S. 573, 91 S.Ct. 2075, 29 L.Ed.2d 723 (1971); United States v. Chavez, supra. Aguilar's second prong is satisfied by statements that both informants obtained their information through either personal observations or personal conversations with specified participants in the lottery. Additionally, numerous details of Informant One's information were confirmed by independent police surveillance. See Draper v. United States, 358 U.S. 307, 79 S.Ct. 329, 3 L.Ed.2d 327 (1959); Gonzales v. Beto, 425 F.2d 963 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 400 U.S. 928, 91 S.Ct. 194, 27 L.Ed.2d 189 (1970). This combination of informants' tips and police observations on several occasions over a four-month period is amply sufficient to warrant a man of reasonable caution in the belief that an offense has been or is being committed, and it therefore constitutes probable cause. Brinegar v. United States, 338 U.S. 160, 69 S.Ct. 1302, 93 L.Ed. 1879 (1949).

[4] Tucker and Hughes argue that the district court erred in denying their motions to compel disclosure of

[2] The district court suppressed evidence derived from Informant Two's information. The government does not appeal that decision, and appellants do not allege that any evidence was admitted in violation of that order.

[3] The FBI agents' affidavit stated that Informant One had been contacted at least ten times in the previous six months and in each instance had provided information which had proven accurate "through contact with other sources and/or independent investigation." A comparable statement is made about Informant Three.

any electronic surveillance without requiring of the government a formal denial of unlawful surveillance. These motions were accompanied by counsels' memoranda stating, "Defendants allege that the Government may have conducted illegal electronic surveillance on them and their attorneys, both past and present." (emphasis added). Tucker and Hughes rely on 18 U.S.C. § 3504(a)(1), which provides:

> [U]pon a claim by a party aggrieved that evidence is inadmissible because it is the primary product of an unlawful act or because it was obtained by the exploitation of an unlawful act, the opponent of the claim shall affirm or deny the occurrence of the alleged unlawful act . . . .

We hold that the district court was correct in ruling that Tucker and Hughes failed to make a "claim" sufficient to trigger this statute, and therefore the denial of their motions was proper.

[5] This circuit has already defined the specificity required in a statutory "claim" of surveillance of an attorney, Beverly v. United States, 468 F.2d 732, 752 (5th Cir. 1972), and appellants' simple motions and briefs are clearly insufficient. However, this circuit has never defined what is required of a criminal defendant's own "claim" of surveillance. We tend to agree with the Second, Ninth and D.C. Circuits[4] that a "mere assertion" of unlawful surveillance is enough to trigger the government's obligation to affirm or deny. However, such an "assertion" must be, at a minimum, a positive statement that unlawful surveillance has taken place. A generalized motion based on the possibility of such surveillance, which is all that is present here, is not a "claim" within the meaning of 18 U.S.C. § 3504(a)(1).

Our recognition that less specificity is required of a defendant claiming surveillance of himself than is required when he claims surveillance of his attorney should not be construed as approval of naked assertions of surveillance. Nor does it trench in any way upon our holding in United States v. Stevens, 510 F.2d 1101 (5th Cir. 1975), that the adequacy of the required government denial depends on the specificity of the allegation of illegality. As in the area of attorney surveillance, the district court retains wide latitude to strike the necessary balance between due regard for a defendant's constitutional rights and the right of the United States to proceed with reasonable promptness in its investigations and prosecutions. See Beverly v. United States, supra.[5]

[6, 7] Tucker and Hughes filed pretrial motions to obtain disclosure of the grand jury records of voting and the grand jury testimony of government witnesses who were not called at trial. A defendant must show "particularized need" to justify infringement of the secrecy surrounding a grand jury. Posey v. United States, 416 F.2d 545 (5th Cir. 1969), cert. denied,

[5] In view of our disposition of this issue, we do not reach the issues of the propriety or sufficiency of the affidavits of denial submitted by the government to this court. However, we note that these affidavits are far more limited and equivocal in their denials of surveillance than anything yet accepted as an adequate statutory "denial." See United States v. Vielguth, supra n. 4 (Chambers, J., dissenting).

Snowden v. U.S., 397 U.S. 946, 90 S.Ct. 964, 25 L.Ed.2d 127 (1970).[6] Appellants' unsubstantiated assertions of improprieties before the grand jury do not approach such a showing. United States v. Howard, 433 F.2d 1 (5th Cir. 1970), cert. denied, 401 U.S. 918, 91 S.Ct. 900, 27 L.Ed.2d 819 (1971). The accompanying motions to dismiss those counts of the indictment allegedly not approved by a majority of the grand jury were likewise properly denied.

[8, 9] Finally, appellants argue that the district court erred in denying them access to the jury lists before the day of trial. The timing of disclosure of jurors is up to the trial court. Stone v. United States, 324 F.2d 804 (5th Cir. 1963) cert. denied, 376 U.S. 938, 84 S.Ct. 793, 11 L.Ed.2d 659 (1964). 28 U.S.C. § 1863(b)(8), which authorizes delayed disclosure of the jury lists when required by the "interests of justice," does not eliminate the court's discretion, and a showing of arbitrariness is required to reverse the trial court's decision. United States v. Stokes, 506 F.2d 771, 777 (5th Cir. 1975). Appellants make no such showing.

II. CONDUCT OF TRIAL

[10, 11] All three appellants forcefully object to the trial judge's conduct in furnishing each juror with a pencil and a photocopy of the indictment before trial.

[6]The Jencks Act, 18 U.S.C. § 3500 (Supp. 1975), amending 18 U.S.C. § 3500 (1969), is not pertinent to these pretrial motions because it requires disclosure only after a witness testifies on direct examination. Appellants do not contend that the Jencks Act was violated in this case.

They argue that allowing the jury to retain a copy of the indictment throughout trial as a "script" of the proceedings was prejudicial. Although we are mildly skeptical of this procedure, the potential for prejudice was avoided here by specific instructions, delivered shortly before and repeated immediately after the copies of the indictment were distributed, to the effect that the indictment was not evidence.[7] Since it is permissible for a properly instructed jury to have copies of the indictment during deliberation,[8] the procedure followed here is permissible; however, we reiterate the need for full and timely cautionary instructions.

[12-14] Appellants also object to the trial judge's decision to limit their peremptory challenges to the minimum of ten required by Fed.R.Crim.P. 24(b). Although they recognize that the decision to grant additional peremptories is a matter within the trial judge's discretion, they argue that there was an abuse of discretion here. The record indicates that the trial judge initially granted additional peremptories to the defendants and to the government but that he withdrew all additional challenges when defense counsel argued that he had no authority to grant additional peremptories to the government. Assuming arguendo

[7]These timely curative instructions distinguish our case from United States v. Baker, 418 F.2d 851 (6th Cir. 1969), cert. denied, 397 U.S. 1015, 90 S.Ct. 1248, 25 L.Ed.2d 429 (1970) (distribution of copies of indictment without cautionary instruction was harmless error).

[8]United States v. Frick, 490 F.2d 666, 671 (5th Cir. 1973), cert. denied, Peterson v. U.S., 419 U.S. 831, 95 S.Ct. 55, 42 L.Ed.2d 57 (1974).

that defense counsel were correct in this argument,[9] it is nonetheless permissible for the parties to stipulate for additional peremptories by both sides. E.g., United States v. Mitchell, 384 F.Supp. 564 (D.D.C. 1974). As a corollary of these principles, it is within the trial court's discretion to condition the grant of additional peremptories to the defendants upon such a stipulation. Id. We are convinced that this posture was the essence of the trial court's final ruling on the issue of peremptories in this case.

Finally, appellants object to several portions of the court's instructions to the jury. We view the instructions as a whole[10] and find appellants' objections to be without merit.

III. SUBSTANTIVE CLAIMS

[15, 16] Appellants make a general objection to the sufficiency of the evidence, but we find the evidence to be more than sufficient when viewed in the light most favorable to the government, as required by Glasser v. United States, 315 U.S. 60, 62 S.Ct. 457, 86 L.Ed. 680 (1942). However, appellants also argue that the evidence is insufficient to establish the requisite jurisdictional fact that each defendant was a participant in the illegal gambling operation for a 30-day period.

[9]Their argument is based on the inferences from the last sentence of Fed.R.Crim.P. 24(b), which provides:

> If there is more than one defendant, the court may allow the defendants additional peremptory challenges and permit them to be exercised separately or jointly.

[10]E.g., United States v. Cisneros, 491 F.2d 1068 (5th Cir. 1974).

This argument rests on a misunderstanding of the jurisdictional requirements of 18 U.S.C. § 1955. Once the evidence demonstrates that the five-man/30-day jurisdictional test is met,[11] it is not necessary for the conviction of one joining the enterprise that he be a participant for thirty days. United States v. Marrifield, 515 F.2d 877, 882 (5th Cir. 1975).

Finally, appellants' challenge to the constitutionality of 18 U.S.C. § 1955 is foreclosed by United States v. Harris, 460 F.2d 1041 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 409 U.S. 877, 93 S.Ct. 128, 34 L.Ed.2d 130 (1972).

Affirmed.

[11]Here the government called five witnesses who admitted participation in this lottery for more than thirty days.

BRIEF FOR THE UNITED STATES IN OPPOSITION

OPINION BELOW

The opinion of the court of appeals (Pet. App.) is reported at 526 F.2d 279.

JURISDICTION

The judgment of the court of appeals was entered on January 22, 1976. The petition for a writ of certiorari was filed on February 20, 1976. The jurisdiction of this Court is invoked under 28 U.S.C. 1254(1).

QUESTIONS PRESENTED

1. Whether the evidence was sufficient to support petitioners' convictions.

2. Whether under 18 U.S.C. 3504 the government must affirm or deny the existence of illegal electronic surveillance upon a claim that such illegality "may" have occurred.

STATEMENT

Following a jury trial in the United States District Court for the Middle District of Georgia, petitioners were convicted on two counts of conducting an illegal gambling business and conspiracy to commit that offense, in violation of 18 U.S.C. 1955 and 371, respectively.[1] Petitioner Tucker was sentenced to concurrent terms of five years' imprisonment and was fined $20,000; petitioner Hughes was sentenced to concurrent terms of three years' imprisonment and was fined $10,000; petitioner Jackson was sentenced to concurrent terms of 18 months' imprisonment. The court of appeals affirmed (Pet. App. 1a-9a).

The evidence adduced at trial[2] showed that petitioners operated a gambling enterprise based upon daily stock and bond quotations on the New York Stock Exchange (Tr. 288, 558-564). To facilitate the enterprise, petitioners employed numerous individuals to take bets and transmit recorded wagers and money (Tr. 297, 303, 308). Petitioners Tucker and Hughes instructed these individuals in the procedures to be followed (Tr. 354-355, 429-430) and periodically collected tickets and money from them (Tr. 356, 432). On other occasions, the tickets and money were delivered to Ray Bradley's service station or Edward Nash's pool room (Tr. 364, 399, 467) and then forwarded to Jackson and Hughes (Tr. 84-86, 388-389). Once the tickets and money were collected, petitioners gathered at Hughes' trailer to count the cash receipts and check the tickets to determine which bettors had won (Tr. 84-85).

[1]Defendants Ray Bradley and Edward Nash pleaded guilty to these charges prior to trial.

[2]Seven unindicted co-conspirators testified concerning the gambling enterprise. Four of them testified that they had participated in the lottery operation during 1972-1973 (Tr. 84, 135, 350-351, 387, 429-430). Three of them testified that they had participated from 1969 or 1970 until the termination of the enterprise in December 1973 (Tr. 394-395, 405-406, 466-467).

On December 18, 1973, pursuant to searches under warrants, federal agents seized tickets, lottery records and approximately $7,000 in cash from Hughes' trailer (Tr. 217-230), and lottery records from Bradley's service station (Tr. 243-244) and from Nash's pool room (Tr. 245-247, 252-262). The records showed that the gambling enterprise had operated at least since September 1973 (Tr. 292-294, 300-314, 317-322); that daily gross revenues often had exceeded $2,000 (Tr. 346); and that annual gross revenues had exceeded $1.1 million (Tr. 346-348).

ARGUMENT

1. Petitioners contend that the evidence was insufficient to support their convictions. 18 U.S.C. 1955 defines an "illegal gambling business" as one which is in violation of law, which "involves five or more persons who conduct, finance, manage, supervise, direct, or own all or part of such business" and which "has been or remains in substantially continuous operation for a period in excess of thirty days or has a gross revenue of $2,000 in any single day" (18 U.S.C. 1955(b)(1)(ii), (iii)). The jury was instructed in terms of this definition (Tr. 645).

The evidence, when viewed in the light most favorable to the government (Glasser v. United States, 315 U.S. 60, 80), was sufficient to support such findings. The three petitioners operated the enterprise in cooperation with Bradley and Nash; the enterprise had been in existence from January 1973 until its termination in December 1973; and daily gross revenues often exceeded $2,000.

2. Petitioners also contend that the district court erred in denying their pretrial motions to compel disclosure of any electronic surveillance, without requiring that the government affirm or deny that it engaged in illegal electronic surveillance. Petitioners rely on 18 U.S.C. 3504(a)(1), which provides that upon a claim by an aggrieved party that evidence is inadmissible because it is the primary product of an unlawful act or was obtained by the exploitation of an unlawful act, "the opponent of the claim shall affirm or deny the occurrence of the alleged unlawful act."

Prior to trial, petitioners[3] moved to compel disclosure of any electronic surveillance. In memoranda supporting that motion, petitioners alleged that "the Government may have conducted illegal electronic surveillance on them and their attorneys * * * (emphasis added)" (Pet. App. 4a). The memoranda contained no additional supporting facts or affidavits. The district court denied the motion on the ground that petitioners had failed to make a "claim" sufficient to require that the government affirm or deny illegal electronic surveillance under 18 U.S.C. 3504(a)(1).

Whether a claim under Section 3504 must show some basis for suspecting an illegal action (see United States v. See, 505 F.2d 845 (C.A. 9), certiorari denied sub nom. Gordon v. United States, 420 U.S. 992) or need amount to no more than a "mere assertion" (see In re Evans, 452 F.2d 1239, 1247 (C.A.D.C.)), the statute clearly requires, as a bare minimum, that the defendant actually claim that illegal surveillance has occurred and that evidence gained therefore is inadmissible. United States v. Toscanino, 500 F.2d

[3]Petitioner Jackson did not raise this claim either in the district court or the court below (see Pet. App. 3a-4a).

267 (C.A. 2).[4] Petitioners, however, did not claim that they had in fact been the subject of illegal electronic surveillance or that any evidence introduced against them was the result of any such surveillance. Their motion was simply "a fishing expedition" (United States v. See, supra, 505 F.2d at 856), and the district court was accordingly correct in finding that it did not entitle petitioners to put the government to the trouble of canvassing the various agencies whose law enforcement techniques include the use of electronic surveillance.

CONCLUSION

It is therefore respectfully submitted that the petition for a writ of certiorari should be denied.

[4]Clearly, petitioners' assertion that their counsel may have been the subjects of electronic surveillance is insufficient to require an affirmation or denial by the government. As the court of appeals noted in Beverly v. United States, 468 F.2d 732, 752 (C.A. 5):

> [A]ffidavits [alleging unlawful electronic surveillance of counsel] should as a minimum name the counsel in question, the outside dates of attorney representation and suspected surveillance, the [clients] represented by such counsel, as well as the numbers of the telephones over which the surveillance might have occurred and any other available data tending to identify the suspected surveillance.
